

El rol de NAF en Latinoamérica

Vicki Saporta
Presidenta y Directora Ejecutiva
Federación Nacional del Aborto (NAF)

www.prochoice.org

La misión de NAF

Garantizar la provisión de servicios accesibles de aborto seguro y legal, a fin de promover la salud y la justicia para las mujeres

NATIONAL ABORTION
FEDERATION

Nuestros integrantes

- Clínicas privadas y clínicas sin fines de lucro
- Centros de salud para mujeres
- Consultorios médicos
- Hospitales

Garantizar servicios de aborto SEGURO

Estándares de calidad

www.prochoice.org

Visitas de aseguramiento de la calidad

Asistencia técnica

Capacitación y educación

Congresos de NAF

Congreso de la Federación Nacional del Aborto

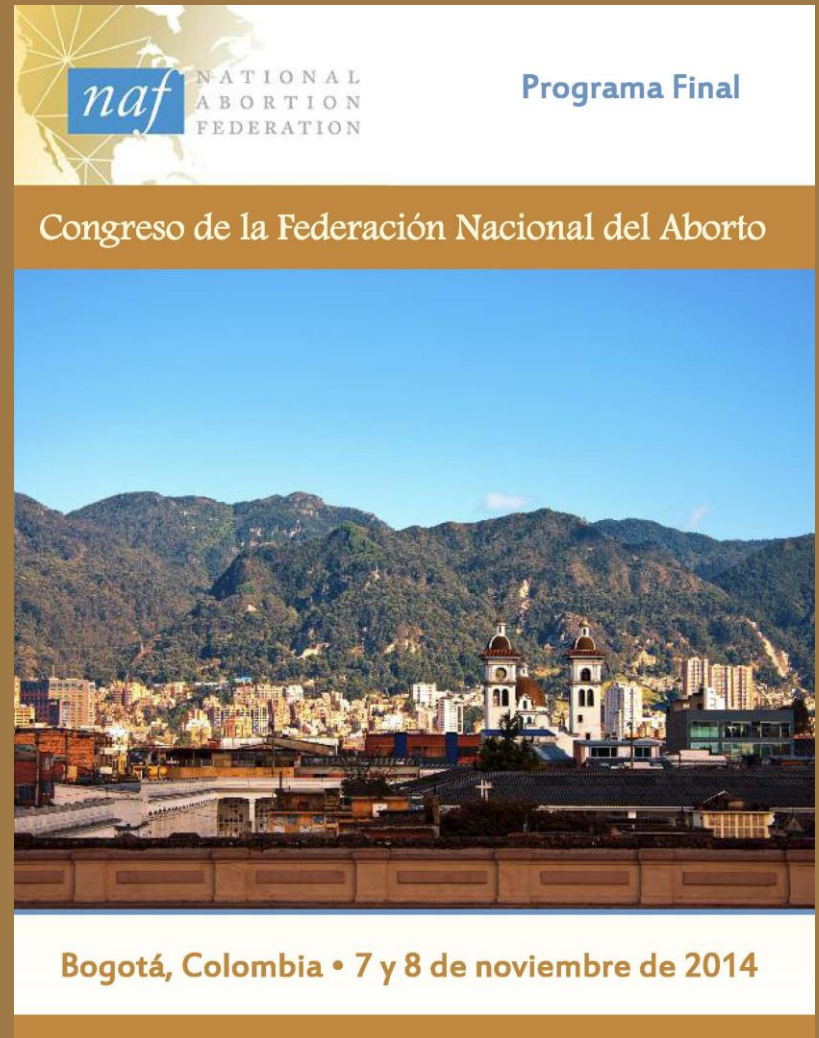

MÉXICO, DISTRITO FEDERAL
DEL 9 AL 12 DE SEPTIEMBRE DE 2012

Atención del Aborto

Experiencias del
Continente Americano

naf NATIONAL ABORTION FEDERATION

Programa Final

naf NATIONAL ABORTION FEDERATION

Programa Final

Congreso de la Federación Nacional del Aborto

Bogotá, Colombia • 7 y 8 de noviembre de 2014

Reunión anual

Garantizar servicios de aborto LEGAL

Aspectos jurídicos

Medios de comunicación

GLAMOUR
8 Really Good Sex Ideas
And 5 Bad Ones
LOS TOP 100 JUST SLEPT
MO
This Is Our Tea
You Can JUST UP
How $250
More

Jennifer
On Lasting Love,
Heartbreak and

Glamour / Sex, Love & Life

PRINT E-MAIL FEEDS SHARE YAHOO BUZZ

The Serious Health Decision These Women Are Ready to Talk About: Eight Women Share Their Abortion Stories

February 10, 2009
by Liz Welch

One out of three women will have an abortion by the time she's 45. Yet women don't discuss how they decided to end a pregnancy—or not; how it felt and how they recovered, physically and emotionally; how they look back on their choice as time passes. There are great resources that can help women navigate this choice: pregnancyoptions.info can guide you through parenting, adoption and abortion decisions; prochoice.org can refer you to a safe provider; NARAL's state map shows what laws affect abortion access in your area; Exhale offers after-abortion counseling; and immotsorry.net invites women to share their positive experiences with abortion.

And yet those tools can't replace a supportive, nonjudgmental conversation with a friend, sister, colleague or cousin. "There's enormous power in sharing stories and knowing you are not alone," says Jennifer Baumgardner, the author of Abortion & Life.

For a story in our March 2008 issue, Glamour interviewed more than two dozen women about their abortions. Whether the abortion experience was good, bad or indifferent, every woman said she appreciated being asked, "What was the abortion experience like for you?" Here, three women share their own personal stories. We invite you to share your own—we hope this forum will open the dialogue.

the Atlantic

Carol Ball

By Hanna Rosin

Once a month, Carol Ball's trip to work begins early in the morning at the airport when she catches a flight in St. Paul. She completes her journey 200 miles away, in Sioux Falls, at South Dakota's only abortion clinic. Since 2004, Planned Parenthood has been unable to find a South Dakota doctor willing to work at the clinic, so Ball and three other traveling doctors have stepped in. Among the states hostile to abortion providers, South Dakota ranks at the very top, which means Ball has to take certain precautions. She now gets picked up from the airport in South Dakota by a security guard instead of clinic staff.

Ever since Roe v. Wade, the pro-choice movement has dreamed of a world where abortion services are inconspicuous, integrated into a woman's routine health care, and provided by her chosen doctor. But nearly 40 years on, some places are as resistant to this notion as ever. So the movement has had to rely on a handful of pioneers, such as Ball, for whom the culture war is hardly an abstract metaphor. They fly or drive for hours, into states or pockets within states (in North Dakota, Nevada, California, for example) where no local doctors are willing to do the work. They almost always face a line of protesters on their way to work, some of whom hold posters with the doctor's name and face

Antony Hare

Garantizar servicios de aborto ACCESIBLES

Seguridad

Security Resource Manual

Guidelines for Keeping Your Facility Safe

Número telefónico directo

Trabajo colaborativo

